

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A server provides information to a client via a network. The server includes a receiving module for receiving a request for providing the information from said client. The providing request contains a piece of access site information on an access site through which the client accesses said network. The server further includes an acquisition module for acquiring a piece of information corresponding to the access site information, and a transmitting module for transmitting the information acquired to the client.